PREFACE

SCOPE

THIS book lists the charters granting land or secular rights over land that purport to have been issued in England before the Norman Conquest. The term 'charter' is used very loosely for a wide variety of texts including writs, wills, records of disputes and miscellaneous memoranda, as well as landbooks and leases. But although the scope of this list is therefore wide, it is not so wide as that of Birch's Cartularium Saxonicum, which includes professions of obedience, papal letters, manumissions and laws, nor is it wide enough to include such purely ecclesiastical texts as the spurious decree of Archbishop Theodore concerning the division of bishoprics, the act of the council aet Clofeshoum in 803 abolishing the archbishopric of Lichfield, and the synodal statute of the same date concerning the liberties of the Church.¹ Many charters include a description of estate boundaries. Descriptions of this kind which have been preserved without any charter are listed here in a section which also includes the estate survey of Tidenham, but not the miscellaneous vernacular texts concerning the sureties for Peterborough estates, the estates liable for bridge works at Rochester, the St Pauls note concerning the manning of a ship, the account of the types of tenure on various York estates in the early 11th century, and 11th-century notes on food-rents, etc. from Bury St Edmunds, all of which were printed by Miss Robertson in Anglo-Saxon Charters, as nos. 40, 52, 72, 84 and 104 respectively.

The list is in two parts. The first section is devoted to the charters of which reasonably full texts have been preserved. The only deliberate omissions, apart from those already mentioned, are a few spurious texts that were obviously confected long after the Norman Conquest.² The second section lists charters which have been lost or are preserved only partially. It includes charters which have been mutilated, but otherwise it is limited to extracts from or notes of charters. Notes of benefactions are not listed, for land may have been granted without a charter. References to lost charters which may be found in surviving charters are also excluded. It cannot be claimed that the second section of this list is as complete as the first. Not only are there certainly many more references to lost charters in inventories and in the notes of scholars than are listed here, but there are at least two major omissions. The lost charters of Ely reported in the Liber Eliensis are not included, while of the lost charters of Ramsey used by the writer of the Ramsey Chronicle, only those published by Kemble and Birch are here noted. These important sources of references to lost charters are both available in good modern editions³ and the effort needed to list the lost charters used in their compilation would not have been justified.

² Including K 930, 969, 1350.

³ Blake, Liber Eliensis; Macray, Chron. Ramsey. These have now been listed, and discussed, in Hart 1966.

ARRANGEMENT

The second section is arranged in principle according to the houses with which the charters are associated in cartularies, inventories, or in the notes of such scholars as Patrick Young and George Hickes. The three fragments of unknown provenance are listed separately, and the references in Domesday Book are listed in the order in which they appear in that source. The first and major section is arranged as far as possible according to grantors with separate sub-sections for grants by kings, by the laity (including queens and other members of royal families), by bishops and by other ecclesiastical persons, and there are sub-sections for wills, for unattached boundaries, and for texts that do not readily fall into the other categories. Writs are not treated separately.

For each grantor the dated charters are first listed in chronological order. Dates are usually given in charters by the year of the incarnation, but some use indictional dating, and a few are dated by regnal years. Wherever these dates are unambiguous the charters are treated as dated texts. These are arranged in chronological order by their stated date, however absurd this may be. This may slightly distort the correct sequence of the charters, but it makes it easier to find an entry, and the sequence is in any case distorted by the separate treatment of the charters of uncertain date which are listed after the dated texts. If, for any grantor, there is more than one charter in a year, they are arranged by grantees in alphabetical order. In this respect, religious houses are identified by their location rather than by their dedication, so that, e.g. St Mary's, Winchester, comes later than St Paul's, London. If there is more than one charter to the same grantee in one year, the order is alphabetical by estates granted. Charters of uncertain date are arranged in the same way, alphabetically by grantees and, if necessary, by estates. Writs form an exception to this rule, being grouped at the end of each grantor's sub-section, and listed in the order in which they appear in Dr Harmer's Anglo-Saxon Writs. The royal grants are grouped by kingdoms, the rulers of each kingdom being treated in chronological order. Bishops are listed in the chronological order of consecration, and no attempt has been made to separate the charters granted in different sees by bishops who, like Dunstan, were translated. The only sections in which chronological order is not followed are those for wills and bounds. Wills are arranged alphabetically by testators, while alphabetical order is followed for bounds and for the counties in which they are grouped.

THE ENTRIES

For each text the following details are given. (1) A brief description giving the date (if any), the name of the grantor, the grantee and places in which the land is granted. (2) A list of the manuscripts written before A.D. 1800 with their date and a note of any facsimiles or other reproductions. (3) A list of printed versions and translations giving the sources used by the main editions. (4) A bibliography of discussions or significant citations of the charter, with special attention to comments on authenticity. Each of these particulars calls for fuller explanation, as follows.

(1) The description of the charter. The aim has been to facilitate the identification of the charter and to give a brief description of its main features. No attempt has been made to summarize the charters and no account has been taken of considerations involved in the grant, whether the payment of money or the promise of prayers.

The Date. The stated date (whether by the Incarnation or, if clear, by the indiction or regnal year) is given first with an indication of the correct date or date-limits. Date-limits are suggested for most undated charters, but future work will undoubtedly modify many of these limits. Some undated and spurious texts are left undated

The Grantors. Personal names are given, as far as possible, in consistent and recognizable forms. The general rule has been that names in modern use appear in their modern forms, e.g. Alfred, Edgar, Edmund and even Athelstan (but not Æthelred), and that other names are treated as consistently as five centuries of development will allow. The descriptions of individuals are generally those given in the texts, with the important difference that kings are described as of Kent, Wessex or Mercia, rather than as 'of the men of Kent', 'of the West Saxons' or 'of the Mercians' etc. Only the first and most important grantor is normally named here, but in a few entries joint grantors are specified. The consent of a superior is often noted in the charters, but not here.

Grantees. The forms of the charters are followed as far as possible. Thus the earliest entries are described as 'to St Andrew', 'to St Peter', 'to the minster of SS Peter and Paul, Canterbury', 'to the church of SS Peter and Paul, Canterbury' and 'to Mellitus, bishop, and St Peter's Minster'. In the early period monasterium is usually given as 'minster', but in the late Anglo-Saxon period the more conventional descriptions are used, e.g. Glastonbury Abbey. In wills, the institutional beneficiaries are listed, but not all the individuals.

The Estates. The names of the main places in which land or privileges were granted are given in the descriptions. If there is general agreement about the identifications, the modern forms are given, but if there is doubt or disagreement this is reported either in the description itself or in the bibliography of comments. It may be that the bounds attached to a charter show that the grant was more extensive than the places named suggest. Where this has been clearly established it is reported. Anyone interested in minor names or in the detailed study of a region would do well to consult all the charters of that region, and for this reason a county guide to the index of place-names is included.

Language. No attempt is made to distinguish dialects, and in most cases Old, Middle and pseudo-Old English are all listed as English.

(2) The Manuscripts. The manuscript versions of each text earlier than A.D. 1800 are listed in the order of their present location, with the exception that so-called originals are given first. The date of each version is indicated in the conventional form, e.g. 's.xi' for 11th century, 's.xi¹' for the first half of the 11th century, 's.xi²' for the second half, 's.xi med.' for the middle of the century, while 's.xi/xii' stands for the late 11th or early 12th century and 's.xi-xii' for the 11th and 12th centuries. In dating the 'originals' I have been fortunate to have the advice of Mr N. R. Ker and Mr T. A. M. Bishop. Disagreements between them are few and are noted among the comments listed for each text. All the manuscripts cited here are listed on pp. 44–67. These descriptions give the references to Dr G. R. C. Davis's list of cartularies,⁴ to Mr Ker's Catalogue of manuscripts containing Anglo-Saxon, and, for the Bodleian, to the Summary Catalogue. The descriptions of the manuscripts list all the charters occurring in them in the order in which they appear. These lists should serve as check lists, as guides to the manuscripts, and, perhaps most important, as an indication of the charters associated with particular religious houses. So, for example, the texts in B. M., Cotton Tiberius A xiii include the majority of the Worcester charters. References are not given to copies of charters in identifiable transcripts, but the existence of such transcripts is noted in the descriptions of the manuscripts. These lists of contents do not give the folios or pages on which each text appears, but these details may be found under each charter. The foliation or pagination used here is generally the most recent, but in a few manuscripts the modern foliation is irregular or muddled and it has proved simpler to use an old foliation. These instances are noted in the descriptions of the manuscripts.

Abbreviated versions of charters or extracts from or notes of charters are indicated in these descriptions by a letter 'x' after the number, and the existence of an 'original' version of a cartulary copy or modern transcript is shown by a dagger (†) placed before a number. These texts may be particularly valuable in determining the reliability of the copyist.

(3) Printed versions and translations. No attempt has been made to list all printed versions. Only the main editions are given, in alphabetical order. Arabic numerals without a preceding 'p.' or 'pp.' or a volume number refer to the number of a text in a collection. Thus, e.g., K 1336 means No. 1336 in Kemble's collection, while K, vol. iii, 225 and Earle, pp. 228–29 refer to page numbers. The sources of the principal editions are noted and if, as often happens, an editor has based his text on a transcript that is not listed, the number of the source of that transcript is given with an asterisk. So in No. 9 in the list, Birch's sources are given as K and MS 1*, meaning that Birch uses as his authorities Kemble's edition and a transcript of Cambridge, Trinity Hall, 1, the first manuscript listed in that entry. Birch's manuscript source was, in fact, B.M., Harley 686, a transcript of the Cambridge manuscript noted on p. 45 in the list of manuscripts cited. Modern translations are noted.

(4) Comments. No attempt has been made to list all the references to the charters. The intention has been rather to indicate the main opinions that have been expressed. These are given in chronological order, using the abbreviations which are set out in the bibliography. The opinions about authenticity are, of course, of varying value, but there has been no attempt here to omit foolish opinions or to grade the worth of the commentators. The arrangement of comments in chronological order should not be taken to mean that the latest opinion is considered to be the best.

The original intention was to list only published comments, but recently a number of scholars have been kind enough to offer comments based upon their unpublished work. These contributors are Mr T. A. M. Bishop and Mr N. R. Ker, on the dating of 'originals'; Mr N. P. Brooks, on the Canterbury charters; Mrs P. S. Gelling, on the boundaries of Berkshire charters; Dr C. R. Hart, on the charters of the eastern counties; Mr M. Roper, on the charters of Sussex; and Professor Dorothy Whitelock, on the whole collection. To all these, and to Professor H. P. R. Finberg and Professor A. H. Smith, who allowed me to consult work in advance of publication, I am deeply grateful.

The compilation of this work was originally undertaken with the help of Mr Eric John and Dr James Ure. After several years, in which they collected a large part of the material on which the list is based, they withdrew from active participation in the work. Without their help the list would probably never have been completed, and I am grateful to them for permission to make use of their material.⁵ Whatever value this list may have will be largely owing to the help readily given in many quarters. Special gratitude is due to the custodians of manuscripts and, particularly in the British Museum, the Bodleian Library, and the Public Record Office, to the fetchers and carriers of manuscripts. Most of the work on the printed material has been done in the libraries of the universities of Edinburgh, Birmingham and Leeds, as well as in the British Museum and the Bodleian, and I should like to thank the staffs of these libraries for their assistance. Numerous scholars have given advice, encouragement and help, but I should wish, in particular, to record my debt of gratitude to Professor C. R. Cheney, who first suggested to me that a list of comments on charters would be useful, and who has since then helped in many ways; to Mr N. R. Ker, who persuaded me to attempt a comprehensive survey of the manuscripts, and who has continued to provide much valued advice and support; and to Professor Dorothy Whitelock, who generously agreed to read the whole list and has corrected many mistakes, in addition to contributing the comments on authenticity etc. which have already been acknowledged. I am also most grateful to Dr F. E. Harmer, Sir Frank Stenton, Dr G. R. C. Davis, Professor H. P. R. Finberg and Dr Pierre Chaplais. I alone am responsible for the errors and omissions that certainly remain. I shall be glad to hear of corrections and additions and hope in due course to make such information available to interested scholars.

The publication of this list has been made possible by generous grants from the University of Birmingham and the British Academy. The University of Leeds has made a grant towards the cost of typing. Several people have helped with the typing, and I should like to express particular thanks to Mrs S. Williams, Miss A. Totney and Mrs A. Singleton. If this book could have a dedication it would be to my wife.

P. H. SAWYER

In the list of manuscripts, pp. 44-67, a dagger (†) before a number indicates the existence elsewhere of an 'original' version of that charter. Incomplete versions are indicated by the letter x after a number.

In the list an asterisk (*) placed after the number of a manuscript signifies a transcript of that manuscript.

THE MANUSCRIPTS

THE following manuscripts contain the charters listed in this volume. The charters found in each manuscript are here given in the order in which they occur. Dates of cartulary copies and modern transcripts are given in the form generally used in the list (see p. ix) but for the dates of 'originals' it will be necessary to refer to the list. A dagger (†) placed before the number of a copy indicates the existence of what purports to be an 'original' charter. The numbers of such 'originals' are printed in bold type. Incomplete copies are indicated by a letter x placed after the number.

Comments: Stevenson 1904, p. 220, id. 1914, p. 703, seems to be genuine; Turner 1915, pp. xxxv–vi, xxxviii–ix, the reading in MS. 3 ‘strongly favours authenticity’ and gives the date 691; Stenton 1918, p. 437 n. 20, authentic, but dating clause inconsistent; Wallenberg, KPN, p. 10; Harmer, Writs, p. 457, citing Whitelock, probably authentic; John 1960, pp. 26, 50, 53; Whitelock, pers. comm., Hardwick, Elmham, p. 237, quotes a passage from the register versions which, although not in the original, seems to be based on authentic information. The confirmation should probably be dated 8 January 691, a Sunday and the charter itself the previous 1 March, i.e. 690.

Comments: Bond 1878, p. 7, 9th century; B 181 suggests Toccan sceaga is Tickenhurst, Kent; Stenton 1913, p. 23 n. 1, accepted as Æthelbald's last charter; Stenton 1918, p. 443, rejects Birch's identification; Robinson 1921, p. 37, original; Wallenberg, KPN, pp. 41–43, suggests Toccan sceaga may be connected with Tockenham, Wilts.; Darlington 1955, p. 5 n. 24, 'Toccan sceaga may be regarded as the early name of Tockenham in Wilts.'; Whitelock 1955, pp. 21, 459; Finberg 1964, no. 189, authentic; Ch.L.A., 193, copy, written c. 800.

Comments: Turner 1916, p. xxxiii, citing Stevenson, dubious; Robertson, Charters, pp. 259–60, a translation from a Latin original; Vleeskruyer 1953, p. 47; Whitelock 1955, p. 451; Whitelock, pers. comm., behind this translation there was clearly a Latin charter of the type surviving in nos. 87, 88 and 91. Stevenson's suspicions of the latter can hardly now be upheld since no. 1788 supports so much of its wording. I consider these grants of toll authentic and accept this text as a translation of a lost but genuine Latin one.

Comments: Turner 1916, p. xxxiii, citing Stevenson, authentic; Stenton 1918, p. 442 n. 44, possibly represents a text that was produced Printed: B 89 ex K and MS. 1; K 40 ex MS. 1; Mon. Angl., i. 384–85 (no. 17) ex MS. 1.

Comments: Stenton 1933, pp. 323–24, possibly a post-Conquest fabrication using a number of short, early and authentic charters; Wallenberg, KPN, pp. 19–21, 93, associates Hebureahg with Avery Farm in Hoo Allhallows, and suggests that Fercanhamstede is Hamptons near Tonbridge; Whitelock, pers. comm., the passages printed by Birch in square brackets are Kemble's additions and of no validity. It is, therefore, possible that Sighere was witnessing Cædwalla's charter and Wihtried was witnessing the charter of his colleague, Swæfheard.

Comments: Stevenson 1914, p. 692 n. 16, cited; Stenton 1918, p. 451 n. 83, very doubtful; Whitelock, pers. comm., the indiction is right for 828 and the copyist may have omitted a v from dcccxx(v)iii, but rex Anglorum for Egbert's title is suspicious.

A.D. 833. Egbert, king of Wessex, to Beornwyn, Ælflæd and Walenburch, sisters; confirmation of land at Wennland (Woolland, Dorset), the old charters having been lost, and of the division following Beornwyn's inheritance of land at Dartington, Devon. Latin with English bounds.

Comments: Stenton 1918, p. 451 n. 79, may be authentic; Turner 1915, p. xxviii; Wallenberg, KPN, pp. 272–73.

Comments: Bond 1878, p. 7, MS. 1 is a later imitation; Stenton 1918, p. 451, genuine; Stevenson 1904, p. 199 n. 3, a late 10th-century copy; Wallenberg, KPN, pp. 177–79.

281

A.D. 838. Egbert, king of Wessex, to the see of Winchester; grant of land at Shalfleet, Isle of Wight, with confirmation, dated 839, by Æthelwulf, king. Latin.

MS: B.M., Add. 15350, fo. 113^v (s.xii)

Printed: B 423; HS, pp. 619–20, 624–25; K 1044; Pierquin, Conciles, pp. 484–85, 490; Pierquin, Recueil, pt 3, no. 46.

Comments: HS, pp. 620, 625, doubtful; Finberg 1964, no. 15, authentic; Whitelock, pers. comm., the presence of Swithhun as a deacon at the Kingston meeting and as a bishop in A.D. 839 shows that this document has at any rate been tampered with.

282

A.D. 845 for 830. Egbert, king of Wessex and Kent, to Ætheric, minister; grant of land at Warehorne and Flotham (lost), Kent. Latin with English bounds.

Printed: B 396; K 224; Pierquin, Recueil, pt 1, no. 129.

Comments: Stenton 1913, p. 13, original; Stenton 1918, p. 445 n. 57, original; Wallenberg, KPN, pp. 165–66, suggests Flotham is represented by Ham Farm in Snargate.

283

A.D. 924 for 7824. Egbert, king of Wessex, to Wulfheard, prefectus; grant of land on the river Meon, Hants. Latin with English bounds.

MS.: B.M., Add. 15350, fos 39^v–40 (s.xii)

Printed: B 377; K 1031; Pierquin, Recueil, pt 3, no. 36.

Comments: Grundy, Hants. 1926, pp. 209–17, identifies the estate as in East Meon and Froxfield; Finberg 1964, no. 10, authentic; Whitelock, pers. comm., the date cannot be 824 if Ælfstan (= Ealhstan) of Sherborne is merely electus, unless the Chronicle is wrong in declaring on his death in 867 that he had held the see for fifty years. The boundaries are certainly later.

284

Egbert, king, to the church of Winchester; restitution of land at Aliesford, Hants. Latin with English bounds.

MS.: B.M., Add. 15350, fo. 22 (s.xii)

Comments: Grundy, Hants. 1921, pp. 69–77, on bounds; Finberg 1964, no. 14, spurious, text and bounds are identical with no. 242 and appear to be taken from a genuine charter of 824 × 833.

285

A.D. 827. Æthelwulf, king, to Chertsey Abbey; confirmation of land and privileges. Latin.

MS.: B.M., Cotton Vitell. A xiii, fos 32^v–33^v (s.xiii)

Printed: B 394; K 222; Thorpe, pp. 78–79.

Comment: Whitelock, pers. comm., the date cannot be right unless Æthelwulf was acting only as king of Kent, etc., in which case he usually says so. It is too early for Swithhun as bishop.

286

Printed: B 426; K 241; Pierquin, Recueil, pt 2, no. 1.

Comments: Bond 1878, p. 7, later and badly written; Stevenson 1914, p. 698 n. 44, contemporary charter; Deanesly 1927, p. 4 n. 3; Wallenberg, KPN, pp. 181–83; Ward 1951.

288

Printed: B 439 ex Thorpe; K 254 ex Thorpe; Thorpe, Reg. Roff., p. 23, claims to print from autograph at Rochester but his text is apparently from Liber Temporalium.

Printed: B 442.

Comments: Stevenson 1904, p. 203 n. 1, in English script but apparently drafted by a Frank; id. 1914, p. 699 n. 48, contemporary; Deanesly 1927, p. 4 n. 3; Wallenberg, KPN, pp. 184–88, on place-names; Parsons 1939, pp. 14–19, genuine and contemporary; Stenton 1955, pp. 47–48; Chaplais 1965, pp. 56–57, in same hand as B 310 (*B.M. A.D. 855 for ?853. Æthelwulf, king of Wessex and Kent, to Ealdhere, his munster; grant of land at Ulaham, Kent. Latin with bounds.

Printed: B 467; Earle, pp. 123–25; K 269; Pierquin, Recueil, pt 2, no. 18.

Comments: Bond 1878, p. 7, contemporary; Stevenson 1904, p. 193 and n. 3, possibly contemporary, there is an error in the indiction, and the charter may possibly belong to A.D. 853; Wallenberg, KPN, pp. 192–97, rejects Birch's identification with Elham, Kent, and suggests it was in or near Monks Horton, Kent; Parsons 1939, p. 25 n.

317

A.D. 856. Æthelwulf, king of Wessex, to Ealdred, his minster; grant of land at Æscesbyrig, Berks. Latin with English bounds.

MS: B.M., Add. 15350, fos 104^v–5 (s xii)

Comments: Stenton 1913, p. 29; Grundy, Berks. 1927, pp. 141–45; Robertson, Charters, p. 276; Gelling, pers. comm., Æscesbyrig is not Ashbury. It is the Old English name of Uffington Castle, the biggest hill-fort on Æscesdun. This and other grants so labelled refer to estates in Uffington and Woolstone. This particular grant refers to the western half of the modern parish of Woolstone.

319

A.D. 874. Æthelwulf, king of Wessex and Kent, to Eadred; grant of land at Horton near Canterbury, Kent. Latin with bounds.

MS.: B.M., Stowe Ch. 21 (s.xi; O.S. Facs., iii. 21)

Printed: B 538.

Comments: Stevenson 1904, p. 216 n. 1, a strange 11th-century charter; Wallenberg, KPN, pp. 222–23; Whitelock, pers. comm., the king cannot be Æthelwulf in A.D. 874. The witnesses and indiction would fit A.D. 844 and it is possible that the date was altered to A.D. 874 to agree with the list of confirmatory signatures beginning with Archbishop Æthered (A.D. 870–888/9).

Comments: Stevenson 1904, p. 199, suspicious; Darlington 1955, p. 90; Finberg 1961, no. 70, spurious, but authentic basis possible.

Comments: HS, pp. 630, 638, 640, questionable; Stevenson 1904, p. 199, dubious; Robertson, Charters, p. 275, highly suspicious; Darlington 1955, p. 90, 'presumably a forgery'; Finberg 1964, no. 200, interpolated.

Thorpe, Reg. Raff., pp. 18–19.

Comments: Bond 1878, p. 7, probably 11th century; Stevenson 1904, p. 230 n. 2, an 11th-century copy, clearly genuine despite error in date; Stevenson 1914, p. 703 nn. 75, 76, date altered from 850 to 790, perhaps to identify it with no. 130, hand somewhat later than 860 but not 11th century; Wallenberg, KPN, pp. 205–7; Deanesly 1942, p. 107 n. 11, citing Ker, 10th- or 11th-century imitation of 8th-century charter.

Comments: Stenton 1955, p. 40 n. 3, accepted as authentic; Wallenberg, KPN, pp. 216–20; Parsons 1939, p. 23 n.; Whitelock, pers. comm., it seems to be linguistically acceptable.

Comments: Stevenson 1914, p. 692 n. 16, p. 694 n. 32, p. 698 n. 44, doubtful or spurious; Grundy, Dorset 1934, pp. 122–29; Robertson, Charters, pp. 281–82, dated 859 but 870 more probable, may be independent of no. 342; Finberg 1964, no. 574, authentic.

Comments: Field 1906, pp. 85–86, spurious, bounds discussed; Grundy, Berks. 1927, pp. 128–31, on bounds; Whitelock, pers. comm., Æthelred did not become king until 865 and the date could possibly be a misreading. Swithun, who witnesses this charter, is said by Florence of Worcester to have died in 862, but his successor does not apparently attest charters before 867.

A.D. 863. Æthelred, king of Wessex, to Wulfhere, his princeps; grant of land at Buttermere, Wilts.; and at Æscmere. Latin with English bounds.

A.D. 676 × 685. Centwine, king of Wessex, to—; grant of land at Clewer in Wedmore, Somerset.

Source: Index Chartarum II, p. 375.

Comment: Finberg 1964, no. 363. According to De Ant. Glast., p. 53, Wilfrid gave 1 hide at Clewer to the abbey, and the context can be taken to imply that he had been given this by King Centwine. A similar transaction concerning Wedmore was the subject of the charters listed as nos 1667 and 1674. It is therefore possible that the Cenewre rex de Clifwere of Index Chartarum II, p. 375, refers to Centwine's grant to Wilfrid, as suggested by Finberg. It is also possible that the entry Wilferfus rex de Clifwere, inutilis, on the same page is a garbled note of Wilfrid's grant to the abbey, also listed among the contents of the Landbok in Index Chartarum I, p. 370, and here as no. 1675.

Source: Index Chartarum I, p. 371.

A.D. 794. Offa, king of Mercia, to Beaduwulf, abbot, for the church of Glastonbury; grant of 10 hides at Eswirht, or Inesuuyrth juxta Huntspill, Somerset.

Sources: De Ant. Glast., pp. 64, 98; Index Chartarum I, p. 371.

Comment: The Index Chartarum suggests that Offa granted this estate to someone who passed it on to Glastonbury. De Ant. Glast. states that Offa gave it to Glastonbury, and adds that Ethelmund assensu regis Offae dedit Hunespulle 1 hidam. Finberg 1964, no. 397, assumes a grant by Offa to Æthelmund of 1 hide at Huntspill. Finberg 1961, no. 47, identifies Inesuuyrth with Insworth near Gloucester although Index Chartarum places it juxta Hunespull?, more than 50 miles from Gloucester.

INDEX OF PERSONS AND PLACES

Compound place-names whose qualifying element precedes the main element are indexed under both qualifying and main elements. Compound place-names whose qualifying element follows the main element are indexed under the main element only, and where there are several compound place-names sharing an identical main element, the second class of compound names follows the first. Titles and descriptions of persons, such as minister, thegn, priest, clerk and nun, are normally omitted, but the more important designations, such as king, archbishop, abbot, comes and ealdorman, are given, as well as clearly defined family relationships, such as 'son of', 'widow of' etc. It must be emphasized that except in the case of a few important and well-documented persons no attempt has been made to indicate different references to the same person; the index should be used as a guide to names rather than persons. Numbers refer to the numbered items, not to pages.
